Young Married Men Beware

Two-way Expansion Of Draft Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—A former defense official said today he thinks it probably will be necessary soon to draft both 18-year-olds and young married men.

Tracy S. Voorhees, former undersecretary of the army, gave this opinion to the Senate preparedness subcommittee. Members of this committee have been debating whether it would be best (1) to draft married men under 26 who have no children, or (2) extend the draft to 18 year olds as recommended by the defense department.

Asked which move he thought would be wiser, Voorhees replied he favored taking 18 year olds first but added:

"It won't make very much difference except in timing, in my personal opinion. We are going to have to take them both over the next 18 months or two years."

Both the Senate group and the House armed services committee are holding hearings on legislation to extend the draft to 18 year olds as a move toward eventual Universal Military Service and Training for all physically fit men, beginning at that age.

Voorhees and two World War II scientific leaders, Dr. Vannevar Bush and Dr. William C. Menninger, joined in urging an immediate start on UMST.

While these three were testifying before the Senate group, Mrs.

By Wash Fayette

I have before me a copy of the Washington Register, published in Washington C. H., January 22, 1951, or a matter of 88 years ago.

It bears the name of A. J. Moon, subscriber, and was left with me by Mrs. W. W. Williams of Jeffersonville.

The old newspaper, consisting of four "blanket sheet" style pages is full of interesting information and illustrations in keeping with the times.

My attention was first attracted by an advertisement headed "150 Recruits Wanted" for services in the Civil War.

The advertisement is illustrated with a soldier in uniform, standing at attention, with a cannon and the U. S. Flag in the background.

Under the illustration is the following:

"To the man. 23rd Ohio Battery! $40 advanced pay and bounty for each recruit.

"The undersigned has been commissioned by the governor of Ohio to raise the 23rd Ohio (Independent) Battery, and 150 good men are now wanted immediately.

"This is a rare, and perhaps the last chance that will be offered in this desirable branch of the services. Now is the time to come forward and go into the service with the big guns. $25 bounty, one month's pay and $20 premium, amounting in all to $40 be paid in advance to each acceptable recruit. Come forward, ye brave boys!

"Those desiring to enlist in the artillery service can apply and be sworn in by calling at The Register office. "Capt. Conrad Garis, recruiting officer."

In a news article it is stated that but 60 of the 150 men wanted had enlisted.

Anna M. Rosenberg, assistant secretary of defense, told the committee the defense department is opposed to raising the draft age above 26 years of age.

Mrs. Rosenberg said one of the department's main objections to a higher draft age is because its recommended UMST program is a "long range one."

UN Is All Set To Name China As Aggressor

LAKE SUCCESS, Jan. 30—(AP)—The United Nations is expected to name Communist China as an aggressor in Korea today, 12 weeks after Gen. MacArthur first reported Chinese Red forces had entered the fight.

Russia and Poland served notice they would speak in the 60-nation political committee against such condemnation, and India warned that passage of the U. S. resolution would end all hope of a peaceful settlement in the Far East.

The protracted debate, which roused American emotions to the boiling point, brought about a great sea-saw of opinion but ended yesterday with 43 countries, including Britain, lined up behind the United States. This is many more than needed for passage of the resolution.

The United States put all the pressure at its command, including a statement by President Truman and resolutions by the House and Senate, into the drive to label the Communist Peiping regime an aggressor.

Chief opposition came from the Soviet bloc, which maintains that the U. S. is the aggressor against Korea and China, and from India, which fears a sharp word to the Chinese Reds may set off World War III.

The Arab-Asian resolution, on which a vote also was scheduled, would set up a seven-power conference to solve Far Eastern problems. Members would be the United States, Russia, Communist China, Britain, France, India and Egypt.

At Canada's suggestion it was modified to provide that the group should arrange a cease-fire in Korea before proceeding to any other business.

Following submission of this amendment, Poland announced it had to speak again in the debate.

The U. S. declared a cease-fire was a military matter and not one to be threshed out at an international conference.

No Relief in Sight From Cold and Ice; 8 Above Low Here

Several County Schools Closed For Second Day in Row—Rest Of Country in Winter Grip too

With ice still holding its frosty grip on Fayette County, traffic was slowed and some of the schools kept closed on Tuesday, the third day which has seen streets, roads and highways covered with slippery sheets.

Reports indicated that two of the county high schools—Bloomington and Jeffersonville -- kept their doors closed the second day in a row because their superintendents felt that it was still too dangerous for school busses to venture out on county roads. A few county grade schools also remained closed.

Meanwhile, many workers who commute every day between here and Springfield, Dayton and Columbus stayed home Tuesday rather than risk traveling on the highways.

Motorists got little help from the weatherman in shaking the icy sheets from streets, walks and roadways.

Coyt Stookey, weather observer here, reported that the mercury skidded to eight degrees above zero Monday night and was still at this low at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning.

A light snowfall Monday night added to the woes of both pedestrians and motorists.

Fortunately, there were no accidents reported by the State Highway Patrol, sheriff's office or city police department over Monday night and Tuesday morning.

No Relief from Cold In Sight for Ohio Yet

(By The Associated Press)

The weatherman held out little promise of relief today for Ohioans who wondered when the ice would melt so he could drive or walk without too much fear of injury.

The forecast was for continued cold in the east portion, with the highest temperatures from 12 to 18 degrees. Tonight is expected to be cold and cloudy—and there may be some snow Wednesday.

The number of victims of falls on slippery streets, sidewalks and steps continued to mount. In Columbus alone more than 200 persons had been treated—most of them in hospitals—since the freezing weekend rain.

In Dayton, so many city policemen had slipped and fallen that Inspector Paul Price told them to (Please turn to Page Ten)

Wage-Price Freeze Thaw Plan Studied

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—A plan to control prices by limiting profits was under government study today while wage stabilizers pressed for their first major policy statement designed to free large blocs of wage earners from the pay freeze of last week.

A new "margin of profit" system of price controls was advanced as one way to replace the dead-halt ordered last Friday on price mark-ups. Price Administrator Michael V. DiSalle said the plan, under which sellers would have to peg prices at cost plus a fixed margin of profit, might be ordered by the end of the week.

The plan DiSalle said he is considering would limit profit margins all along the line from manufacturer to retailer. The Friday price order fixed price ceilings at the highest level between Dec. 19 and Jan. 25. Wages were sealed at Jan. 25 levels.

In the middle of the struggle for an orderly retreat from the temporary wage-price freeze, Wage Stabilization Board Chairman Cyrus S. Ching called on the public to "have patience."

Following submission of this amendment, Poland announced it had to speak again in the debate.

The U. S. declared a cease-fire was a military matter and not one to be threshed out at an international conference.

Old Theft Case Here Reopened

$2,600 Lost in 1947, Complaint Charges

Police Chief Vaiden Long Tuesday reopened investigation of an alleged robbery here in December, 1947, in which theft of $2,600 was reported by Mrs. Gertrude Flowers, 113 Blackstone Avenue.

The case was reopened upon request of Attorney Reed M. Winegardner, representing Mrs. Flowers. Winegardner wrote a letter to Chief Long asking that further inquiry be made into the case.

When Chief Long went over the police records he could find no report regarding the robbery and newspapers of and near the date, Dec. 22, 1947, failed to disclose any report of such theft.

When Chief Long went over the Flowers and questioned her at length concerning the robbery, and announced his intention of making an investigation. Mrs. Flowers said the date could have been December, 1946.

A copy of the letter also was placed in the hands of Prosecutor Clark Wickensimer, who is joining in the inquiry.

New Liquor Chief Named by Governor

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30—(AP)—Gov. Frank J. Lausche today announced the appointment of William C. Bryant of Columbus as state liquor director to succeed Oscar L. Fleckner, resigned. The appointment will become effective Feb. 1.

Bryant, 49, served as chief counsel for Herbert S. Duffy during most of the latter's term as attorney general. He resigned last summer to accept appointment from Lausche as Franklin County common pleas judge, to fill a vacancy caused by death.

The liquor director's post pays $9,000 yearly.

Change Is Sought In VA Insurance

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—Rep. Ayres (R-Ohio) today launched an attempt to induce the Senate to vote a $2,000 lump-sum payment to survivors of war dead. Ayres said he also hopes the Senate will alter a House-passed bill to space out the remainder of a $10,000 indemnity over a 10-year period.

Ayres told a reporter he plans to confer with Senator Taft in hopes the senior Republican senator from Ohio will throw his efforts in that direction.

Taft is a member of the Senate finance committee, which has held a hearing on the bill.

Probe Proposed In Legislature For Ohio Relief

Domestic Relations Law Changes Sought In Another Bill

COLUMBUS, Jan. 30—(AP)—A proposal for a two-year investigation of poor relief methods in Ohio to cut fraud and waste is before the state legislature.

It was proposed last night by two Cincinnati Republicans, Reps. Al Glandorf and Robert Groneman. They asked creation of a six-member commission to make the investigation and report back to the legislature by Jan. 15, 1953.

It would be composed of three senators and three representatives. It would have authority to summon witnesses and conduct hearings in all parts of the state. And, the Cincinnatians proposed the commission be given a $25,000 appropriation to do the job.

Domestic Relations

Rep. George E. Fedor (D-Cuyahoga) and Rep. J. E. Simpson (R-Hardin) offered in the House a bill to revise the state's domestic relations laws. Drafted by the Bureau of Code Revision at the direction of the last legislature, the bill is similar to one offered in the Senate last week by Sen. Carl Sheppard (R-Summit).

Trains Are Tied Up In Chicago, Detroit By Wage Dispute

(By The Associated Press) Railroad switchmen reported sick today on at least six railroads in the Chicago and Detroit areas, hampering movement of vital freight.

A spokesman for the army, which is running the railroads, said freight traffic in the Chicago area is "definitely hampered" and that "the situation is building up rapidly."

The spokesman, who declined use of his name, said about 80 percent of the switchmen failed to report at the Santa Fe Railroad in Chicago, and about 90 percent at the belt railway company of Chicago, also known as the "inner belt" line.

The small Chicago and Illinois Western Railroad was 100 percent affected, he said.

He added that the walkout had spread to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Chicago, with an estimated 20 percent of the switchmen staying home.

Railroads affected in Detroit were the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Wabash.

Passenger service apparently was not affected immediately.

The "sick calls" followed the pattern of a three-day work stoppage in December when about 10,000 yard workers—mostly switchmen -- reported "sick." A long wage dispute is involved.

1950 Campaign Surpasses Goal

Community Chest Is Still Open To Include all Fund Drives

Directors of the Community Chest here favor combining all separate drives under one banner. This was indicated at the annual meeting of the Community Chest Monday night in the Washington C. H. Chamber of Commerce office.

While the board made no official statement to this effect, it was the consensus of the board that it would continue to invite other organizations, such as the Red Cross, March of Dimes, Cancer Society and other groups to join the Chest.

Since the Chest was organized here two years ago, this "open door" policy has been followed. In another important action, Community Chest leaders rejected two board members, Rev. Francis T. McCarthy and Miss Grace Huston, and elected three new board members, Mrs. Margaret Powell, Charles Reinke and Raymond Scott. All will serve three year terms.

Robert Brubaker, president, reported that total cash and pledges to date were $12,966.49. Since the Chest sought a goal of $12,500, it now has a balance of $466.49.

Tops 1950 Goal

It was interesting to note in the annual report that campaign expenses, including the secretary's salary of $600, totaled $974.59. All the nine participating agencies received 100 percent of the amounts for which they asked.

Some discussion was held relative to means of conducting the drive in the rural areas. (Please turn to Page Two)

Girl Says Parents Sold Her For $5 and Tank of Gasoline; Station Operator Backs Story

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30—(AP)—An 11-year-old girl says her parents sold her for five dollars and a tankful of gasoline.

Shirley O'Brien, round-eyed and pig-tailed, quoted this figure to Policewoman Elizabeth Eggleston last night. She said her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien, first tried to "sell" her for $10 to a filling station operator, then took the $5 and the gas and skipped.

The serviceman, Cecil Glover, said he wanted no part of the arrangement but finally gave the O'Briens the handout "because I felt concerned about Shirley's welfare."

Glover, who has an eight-year-old daughter, said he turned the matter over to the police as soon as he became convinced the O'Briens would not return. He said he had received a postcard saying their jolopy had broken down in Bakersfield and that the family was hitchhiking to San Francisco.

The O'Briens had four other children, ranging from one to eight years old, he said, and there was another on the way.

Juvenile authorities, who disclosed the story, have taken charge of Shirley.

Report on Farm Prices To Determine Ceilings

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—

A government price report was due to show late today whether any additional major farm products have reached levels at which price ceilings can legally be fixed.

Under a price freeze order issued last Friday, only cotton, wool, rice, cottonseed, beef cattle, veal calves, lambs and hogs were declared to have reached ceiling levels.

The order, however, did not place ceilings on these or any farm products themselves, but only on foods and materials processed from them.

Few if any additional farm commodities were expected to be added to a minimum ceiling list. The bulk of agricultural products is selling below levels at which they can be controlled, under terms of the law, despite an overall increase of 16 percent in farm prices during the last half of 1950.

Law Fixes Ceilings

The law says ceilings on farm products must not be fixed below the higher of these figures: (1) parity prices or (2) the peak prices farmers received in the period of May 24 to June 24, the month before the Korean war began.

Parity prices -- which will be the guide for ceilings for most farm commodities -- are a standard for measuring agricultural prices. They are declared by law to be fair to both the farmer and those who buy his products.

Today's report -- to be issued by the agriculture department at 3 P. M., EST -- was due to give January parity prices for about three dozen farm products. Parity prices for more than 100 others will be issued Wednesday. These parity prices will guide control operations for the full month of February.

Parity Fluxuates

Parity prices move up and down with corresponding changes in prices farmers pay for goods and services used in family living and in farm production. Prices farmers pay advanced about four percent during the last half of 1950. This advance pulled up parity prices.

Today's report was expected to show a further increase in parity prices of most farm products. There may be exceptions in the case of a few commodities for which the department will use, under direction of law, a revised formula for calculating parity. Those commodities include potatoes, citrus fruits, eggs, barley, oats, rye, grain sorghums and fruits and vegetables.

Two More Boys Listed in Gang

Group Reportedly Operated Near Here

Two more youths have been arrested as part of a gang which allegedly has been engaged in petty crimes in Highland, Fayette and Clinton Counties during recent months. They were arrested and taken to Hillsboro.

Horses from Here Sold at Auction

Harness horses, pointed for racing next year, and brood mares of proven blood lines brought what were described as "very good" prices at auction in Delaware Monday.

McKinley Kirk, breeder-owner here who clerked the sale, said the consignments made by himself and two other Washington C. H. horsemen, Eddie Cobb and A. G. Gordon, brought prices ranging from $700 to $4,400.

Kirk sold Bob Castle, a 4-year-old pacer, for $4,400, and Gay Abbe, a 6-year-old pacer, for $4,100. Both were raced last season.

Cobb's Fair Lad, a 6-year-old pacing stallion, brought $3,100; Viola George, an aged mare, $850; Jerry's Cousin, aged gelding, $750; a green 2-year-old colt by Cardinal Prince, $850, and four 2-year-olds for from $700 to $900.

Gordon's good campaigner of last year, Edna Gordon, a 6-year-old pacer, went for $4,400, and his Brown Command, a 5-year-old pacer, brought $975.

Eight brood mares from Fairmeade Farm in Clinton County that was recently purchased by Kirk and Cobb to be continued as a horse breeding establishment, brought from $500 to $2,000. Miss Linn Direct, a 10-year-old daughter of Billy Direct, headed the list with a $2,000 tag.

Kirk said most of the consignors told him after the sale their horses had gone at prices better than they had expected.

Enemy patrols totalling about 200 men each were encountered four to six miles north and northwest of Icheon. An estimated enemy company attacked with small arms in an area five miles west and northwest of Icheon. At the same time a whistle-blowing Red battalion with grenades and automatic weapons attacked six miles west-northwest of Icheon. Associated Press Correspondent William Barnard said Greek troops repulsed this attack at 5:30 A. M. (3:30 P. M. EST Monday).

The North Korean radio claimed Red troops had shot down and captured four UN fliers. The broadcast on the Pyongyang radio asserted North Korean Communist troops had inflicted "great losses" on UN troops in the Suwon area.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—The whole attempt to control prices and wages is going to get more complicated, not less.

And you may wind up badly puzzled unless you keep in mind a few of the basic things which form the background for what's going to happen.

In the first place, the government didn't have any power to control prices and wages until Congress last September passed a law.

This was called the defense production act of 1950. It is not a simple law. It runs to 27 printed pages. Briefly, it did this:

It gave the government power to control the flow of materials needed for defense and power to control prices and wages.

That law is the starting point for all that's going to happen. To carry it out, President Truman created the OPS (Office of Price Stabilization) and the WSB (Wage Stabilization Board.)

In all they do those two agencies will have to be guided by the law. And like any other agency set up to carry out a law, they'll have to interpret it.

In due time, no doubt, some businessmen, or labor leaders, or congressmen or the public will start screaming about OPS, WSB or the law itself.

If the screams become intense, the law will have to be changed, or OPS or WSB will have to change its way or its officials who do the interpreting.

The price-wage freeze imposed by OPS and WSB Friday night was only temporary, they thought they had to use an emergency measure to stop rising living costs dead in their tracks, if only for a little while.

But if that emergency freeze, whipped together in almost frenzied haste, was permitted to stand unchanged, it would be unfair to many people: businessmen, workers and the buying public.

1. It would be unfair to workers who hadn't had a raise recently enough or large enough to keep them abreast of living costs or who had agreements for a raise when the freeze hit or were negotiating for a raise. So WSB will have to pry the freeze open to make allowances for them. It will be busy handling cases like that for months and maybe years.

2. It would be unfair to businessmen who can show they must charge even higher prices to avoid bad losses because of recent higher costs of things they bought. So OPS will have to handle their cases, by thousands. More holes in the freeze.

3. And it would be unfair to the buying public if it has to pay for things whose prices have been raised by greed and not necessity. So OPS will have to roll some prices back.

Since these things can't be cleared up in a day or a week, it's plain that OPS and WSB will have their hands full so long as they exist.

Still, all the changing and adjusting which lie ahead seem certain to punch holes in price and wage controls, pushing living costs still higher.

But the law itself complicates matters still more. Fortunately, it doesn't let OPS slap price controls clear across the board on everything and everything.

It says that the prices of farm products can't be frozen until they reach parity or the prices prevailing just before the Korean war, whichever are higher.

The government decided what price a farmer should be able to charge for a certain product in

Several from County To Go To Festival

Several high school musicians from Fayette County will attend the annual high school musicians festival, to be sponsored Saturday, Feb. 10, by the Department of Music of Ohio Wesleyan University.

The supervisor who will accompany the Fayette County students is William B. Clift Jr., of Washington C. H. High School.

Guest conductors for the festival will be Alfred Vorherr, band director of the Dover High School, band; Thelbert Evans, supervisor of music for Lakewood schools, chorus; and John Farinacci, instrumental director at Cleveland Heights High School, orchestra.

Band and orchestra players will register at 9 A. M., after which they will try out for places in the festival bands and orchestra. Because of the number of delegates this year, there will be three bands instead of the usual one.

The Ohio Wesleyan band, under the direction of Charles Thompson, and orchestra, under the direction of Romine Hamilton, will present a concert at 11 A. M. in Gray chapel.

Chorus members will register by 1 P. M. and start rehearsal at 1:30. There will be some 375 students in the three bands, 560 in the chorus, and 125 in the orchestra.

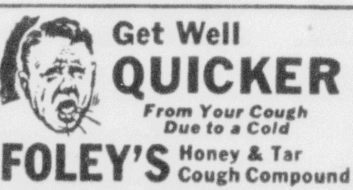

order to get a fair return on his labor.

This price computed by government formula is called parity. Some farm products still are being sold below parity.

So on these below-parity products the farmer can keep raising his prices until they reach parity or pre-Korean war levels. And the businessmen who buy those products can pass on the higher price to you until the item does reach parity.

That's why some of the prices you pay for food are still going to go up, in spite of the Friday freeze, which wasn't and couldn't be a freeze on the exempt below-parity products.

OPS couldn't do anything about holding down the prices on them. Congress wrote the law that way.

Concert lovers in Washington C. H. received good news Monday through Mrs. J. Rankin Paul, general chairman of the Community Concert campaign.

The DePaur group will appear here sometime during the 1951-52 concert season. The date will be set by the chorus to fit in with its itinerary.

Community Concert members of the city who want to get a preview of the chorus will have that opportunity Feb. 27, when the chorus will appear in Jackson.

The next concert here will be Feb. 28, when Carolyn Long, soprano, will appear on the stage of the Washington C. H. High School auditorium.

Concert association members also will be interested in learning that the Philharmonic Piano Quartet will appear at Chillicothe Feb. 1.

Maybe You Think It Can't Happen Here

If anyone went into the streets of Washington C. H. and asked the question—"Will Communists ever take over the United States?"—What do you think would be the answer or reaction?

Chances are that not one person out of a hundred would think or say that there was even a remote chance of such a thing. In nearly every city and county in this country the same sentiment and ideas would prevail as would be the case here.

In these confused and hectic days, however, there are some things to remember. One of them is that under certain conditions something like that could happen here.

When the Communists overthrew imperial Russia they represented a mere handful of the population. Accredited figures say they represented only one person in 2,300 of the Russian population.

According to equally reliable statistics there is one active Communist for each 1,800 persons today in the United States.

These are things that people do not like to concern themselves with much, but it is not amiss to consider for a moment some of the conditions that could lead to such a situation. Maybe a little more thought will help more people to see the possibilities and give their active support in helping to prevent such an unthinkable result.

There is some slight comfort in the knowledge that when Russia accepted Communism the people were poverty-stricken and desperate, willing to welcome any change which promised better conditions. This situation does not exist in the United States today.

But there is no way to guarantee that such a situation will not exist in the future. The nation's economy could break down under continued inflation and excessive taxation. The resultant conversion of many persons almost overnight by the insidious propaganda of Communism easily might follow.

Mass psychology is a treacherous weapon which is being expertly handled by the Soviet government. Governments have been known to cater to it to retain their own leadership. Until recently our own national administration has been overtly friendly to Russia, giving in effect an indirect but dangerous endorsement of Communism.

For years Russia has had many friends among high-placed Americans. And Communists are continuing to bore from within, at times almost unhindered.

Truman escaped from his handlers the other day long enough to complain that newspapers are not printing what he says. They are not only printing it, but would not have space for anything else if they printed all the letters from readers commenting on his remarks.

Stalin's name appeared 101 times on the front page of a recent issue of Pravda official Russian newspaper. This is something that could be overdone. The population may in time begin to wonder why such self-back-slapping is necessary.

Now that the New Deal is nearing its ultimate culmination, the people are being let in on the secret that it was heading up a dead end street all the time.

After Sad Six Months in Korea

(Editor's Note: Associated Press Columnist Hal Boyle writes here of his impressions on leaving the Korean warfront where he covered the human side of the conflict for six months. He has just returned to the United States.)

TAEGU, Korea —(AP)—This is where I came into the Korean war more than six months ago. And this is where I left it.

You would think a man would be happy to go back to America after spending half a year in a land as sorry and unhappy as Korea.

But the truth is I didn't want to go. I would rather stay and see how the campaign finally came out. The other correspondents came around and poured me a farewell drink and said: "You've been over here about as long as anybody. You ought to have got the hell out of here long ago. No-body cares about this story back in the states anymore. Korea is getting to be back page news. The people at home are worrying about themselves -- not about the army over here."

And my army friends said: "You want to stay on here?" You're crazy. Boy, give me the chance to get back to old Uncle Sugar -- just give me the chance."

I appreciated their sympathy, and I loved them for the liars they were -- beautiful, wonderful, loyal liars. But they didn't fool me at all. Everybody wants to go home in war, but no man who is a man wants to leave his army while it is non-victorious.

In two wars I had retreated with the American army on three continents -- at Kasserine Gap in Africa, at SPA in the battle of Korea. In the retreats in Africa the Belgian Bulge, at Seoul and in Europe I had stayed with the American troops through the entire ordeal and still was with them when they counterattacked and moved back to victory.

This time there was no real prospect of a final victory. The best that can be gained in Korea now is a better diplomatic compromise. It was for this very reason that I hungered most to stay here. I didn't want to "bug out" on this shoeleather army just because it was caught fighting a war down a dead end street.

But this has been the longest and saddest half of my life. I had reached a point where I felt I could no longer do well the job that is mine--to tell the story of individual men in battle. It had all become a gray monotony of the heart and mind, and I had become so worn down with it that I no longer could write it. I could feel the suffering of soldiers and civilian refugees. I could share their dangers. But I no longer could come back and put those experiences into words. I guess I came to identify myself too damn much with this American eighth army I have learned to love.

When a reporter no longer can write about what he sees, it is time that he pasture his spirit elsewhere for a time. And that is why I left for home, neither the first nor the last to go -- but one who wants to try it again, when he can do it again. Otherwise it would be better that I put away my typewriter and pick up a rifle.

It was a hot and sunny day I landed at the airfield here last July. Men fainted in the heat as they fought upon the hills. They were on the defensive then. They were basically back upon the defensive again on the cold bright day I went back out to the same airfield to start my return trip to America. A bitter wind was blowing, and frostbite was now a problem to the men fighting in the hills.

The jeep moved swiftly through the refugee crowded streets of Taegu. Some of the refugees wore white bandages around their faces to hide the spreading rot of gangrene. They had frozen their faces marching south from Seoul, and in a few days many would be dead. They were only corpses afoot.

In a plane I boarded were a number of happy soldiers getting a five-day leave back in Japan. We took off. The plane circled over a bare field dotted with white crosses. It was the largest United Nations cemetery in Korea.

In six months I had made some friends and lost some friends, and some of them were there under the crosses below. I felt I might never see Korea again, or know these dead and living friends again as I had known them here. I pulled my chin down into my parka and cried silently and alone until I fell asleep.

That was the parting I had from Korea, where better men than I have lost something they never can recover -- no, not even if tomorrow a candle of peace were suddenly let upon every bloody frozen hill from Manchuria to Pusan.

A Pause in Respect to the Dead

I suppose when a man passes 50, he begins to go to funerals. For years, I never went to one. During the past week, I went to two and could have gone to a third were I in San Francisco, where my friend, Edgar Rickard, died after living a long and good life. Friends pass on and leave a void that is not filled too soon and sometimes never.

The death of Ben Stolberg is a greater loss to this country than is readily realizable. Ben might have been regarded as the theoretician, the guide and philosopher of anti-Marxism in America. Long before many who today are shocked by the almost inhuman brutality of the Communists realized the dangers of an immoral way of life, Ben Stolberg recognized the evil and the peril to mankind. He inspired a band of fighters.

Ben was a Jew from Germany who came to this country early enough to go to Harvard and the University of Chicago. Although not native in English, he developed a literary style that was pungent, sharp and precise. His use of words mirrored his mind, for he cut through dross and shams with the deftness of a surgeon and found the heart of the problem where it stood out uncovered, for better or for worse. His integrity was so crystal clear that he suffered for being in advance of the times.

But in recent years, he talked more than he wrote. Many of us found in his mind a storehouse of precisely catalogued data and experience, and in his wisdom a guide to the target. We took his wares, hardly realizing that he could have used them to his own advantage. And he gave to whomever asked, without regard to himself, he lived a cause, and his cause was anti-Communism. To put it more constructively, he had discovered the soul of America and made it his faith.

It is interesting -- and surely of more than passing significance -- that this immigrant should have loved America so uncompromisingly. This was no second home. This was no place of refuge. This was all to him.

Perhaps it may sound exaggerated to those who take everything for granted that they find here, but Ben Stolberg literally loved the United States, its traditions, its institutions, its soul. His only son, David, fights in Korea.

Perhaps the full sadness of this apparently jolly man's life was a consciousness that he might have done it all differently. For his convictions and beliefs and faith matured in his fifties as he could not have foreseen in his twenties and thirties. Once perhaps cynical, he had found faith. He had become a conservative in the truest sense of the word, that is, a conservator, one who constructively seeks to reserve, to guard the richness of tradition, making progress within the disciplines of historic truth.

Had he lived longer, this mature view of life would have given his work a new and powerful direction. This I can tell you: many articles written by many writers, many speeches spoken by great public figures, found their inspiration in the conversation and in the notes which Ben Stolberg bestowed so lavishly.

And yet, he had nothing of worldly goods, nor did he even live comfortably. I am certain that in recent years he was not disturbed by the income tax. Boycotted and blacklisted by Communist and fellow-traveler magazine and publishing house editors, he regarded that, too, as part of the fight against Stalin. In fact, while he was dying, in his last hour, he smilingly said: "yes, I did kill Joe Stalin!"

And so our friends go and we weep for them and move on to our work, and then each of us goes, too, and a new generation takes over. Always the satisfaction must be that nothing really dies. We plant our little seeds, and the trees, which we never live to see, grow. We hurl ideas into the air and they do take root.

Stolberg lived long enough to see the day when most Americans are sure that Communism is not just a political party, but an evil out of the apocalypse. He heard the hooves of the Four Horsemen long ago. We can all hear them now, for they are upon us.

Diet and Health Brain Hemorrhage Not Always Fatal

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

In former years there was not too much doctors could do to save a person with brain hemorrhage. It is true that some of these people recovered, but cure was due more to nature than to medical skill. Today, however, newer methods give us more control over such a situation so that the patient's chances for life are increased if his condition is recognized for what it is at once.

When an older person has a sudden attack of severe headache with paralysis of the eye muscles, brain hemorrhage should always be suspected. Mental confusion, convulsions, and unconsciousness following soon thereafter increase the likelihood. The diagnosis can be made more certain by withdrawing a small amount of spinal fluid for examination. In most of these patients, high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries are present. However, in 11 of 57 patients studied, there was no history of high blood pressure. The outlook is much better in those instances where high blood pressure is not present.

Increase in Pressure When an attack occurs, the patient usually has fever, and there is an increase in the pressure of the spinal fluid. In most instances, the condition can be easily diagnosed from the history and physical examination, as well as by the examination of the spinal fluid. However, in case of doubt, an X-ray examination of the skull is helpful.

Prompt treatment of this condition may be life saving, such as heart failure, diabetes, or syphilis. These disorders should be treated promptly. The patient should be given fluids, as necessary, by injection into a vein or under the skin. If anemia is present, it should be corrected with iron-containing drugs, liver extract, vitamin B-12, and blood transfusions when required. The position of the patient in bed must be changed frequently and fever reduced by sponge baths and drugs, if needed. Sedative or quieting drugs also are required.

Blood Clotting

It is possible that both vitamins K and C may assist in blood clotting, so that these should also be administered. In some cases, the bleeding into the brain may result from an aneurysm which is an enlargement of one of the blood vessels in the brain. Surgical treatment may be life saving in these cases, since it is possible to tie off an artery in the neck, or even to open the skull cavity and tie off the artery within the skull.

With modern diagnosis and treatment, some patients with intracranial hemorrhage, not due to injuries, may be benefited to a considerable extent, and the prevention of later attacks accomplished.

"With the autopilot at the controls, the plane will be able to take the steepest dives, turns, rolls and loops with ease."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. A. L.: Is it possible to definitely diagnose cancer without a biopsy?

Answer: This would depend upon the location of the cancer and the symptoms present. In many cases, cancers, such as those of the bowel or stomach, can be diagnosed definitely by X-ray examination. In other instances, a biopsy may be required, as in cancer of the breast.

Polio Auction Response Slow

Appeal for Articles To Sell Gets Little

An auction of usable but unneeded articles was planned some time ago by the March of Dimes committee to help raise funds for carrying on the war against dreaded infantile paralysis.

Appeal after appeal has been made through newspaper advertisements and by word of mouth but, a spokesman for the committee said today "the response has been very disappointing".

The plan for the auction, he said, is simple. "We are not asking for money... just something that can be sold to the highest bidder". All proceeds, he added, will be put to the polio war fund. Mac Dews is chairman of this year's fund-raising campaign. Ralph V. Taylor and Louis Baer are his first lieutenants in arranging the auction.

Something In the Home

Dews said "there is something in nearly every home that is not used or needed that could be given to the auction... whatever it brings would certainly do more good than it does lying around in the way and catching dirt."

The other committee men said they viewed the auction plan from two angles: (1) a good way to get a little more money to help finance research efforts for a preventative, a treatment and a cure for infantile paralysis and (2) an opportunity to get rid of unwanted and unneeded things in a good cause.

What none of the trio of auction planners can understand is why more things have not been contributed for sale.

"Why, we haven't got enough to start with," Dews said.

And, the committee has made it easy to give things for the auction. There have been no qualifications on what to give—"just anything that can be used and will be bought," said the chairman.

Pick-Up Is Offered

They would like to have the contributions taken to the Fire Department, but if that is not convenient, a truck will be sent to pick them up. A call to any one of the committee will bring the truck to the door—Dews (9791 or 34371), Taylor (7881 or 34171) and Baer (26431 or 9811).

The three said "it doesn't make any difference... they can call us at home or at the office... in a case like this we're never too busy to stop and we won't mind being disturbed at home."

Members of the Lionses Club have gone through the telephone book appealing for contributions for the auction, but with only meager results. That, the committee said, "was discouraging too."

The time of the auction depends on the response to the appeal for things to auction, the headman said. "We want to hold it sometime within the next 10 days," he added but said no definite date had been set yet.

The place of the auction de-ends on the weather. If the weather is good, plans call for holding it outside at some convenient place. If it is bad, a place inside will be found, the committee said. The final decision will be made on the basis of the weather forecast when the date of the sale is determined.

As for buyers, the committee had little doubts. "Nearly everybody likes to go to an auction", one of the members said.

"How I Relieve Distress of Monthly Female Complaints and nervous feelings several days before... with Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—truly 'the woman's friend'"

Several days just before my period I'd feel so nervous, irritable, so restless, easily upset at the slightest thing—due to female functional monthly disturbances. I asked my druggist for something to take, and he told me Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I get simply amazing relief from this distress. Pinkham's Compound also relieves monthly headache, backache and those miserable "bearing-down" pains—due to this cause. Taken regularly—it helps build up resistance against such distress.

What also impressed me about Lydia Pinkham's Compound is that it's made strictly from nature's roots and herbs (plus Vitamin B.). There are no harmful drugs in it. This is really a great comfort. I wish you girls troubled this way would give this great medicine a fair trial.

P.S. Pinkham's Compound tastes swell in a little fruit juice or just plain water. Or you may prefer Lydia Pinkham's TABLETS with added iron—pleasant to take and easy to carry in your purse.

Hamilton Tops High Schoolers

Deshler Is No. 1 In Class B Rating

BY FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, Jan. 30 —(P)— Hamilton Public in class A, and Deshler in Class B, clung to the top spots today as Ohio's outstanding high school cage teams in the weekly Associated Press poll of sports writers.

Carl Bachman's fine Findlay team furnished the big news in Class A, rolling over Tiffin Columbian and Kenton for its 13th and 14th wins without defeat to slip around Middletown into second place. The upstate Trojans have won 98 of their last 103 games.

Chillicothe was the only newcomer to the Big Ten in Class A, the Cavaliers winning their 11th in a row to grab the tenth spot from Barborton's Magics by a single point in the voting.

THIS AND THAT from here and there: Little Walnut Creek, with only 15 boys in school, has won 15 of 18 for Coach John Ridley, former Ohio Northern athlete. The Creek Club has been aided by Richard (Ike) Hostetter, a six-foot married senior, who transferred from Sugar Creek-Shanesville.

First of Ohio's 87 Class B county meets gets under way Feb. 6, Jackson is the only county not having a tournament, and 869 teams will get into the tournament races. Lucas County has only two teams in its Class.

Hamilton defeated Cincinnati Purcell 49-41 and Lancaster 66-60 to stay atop the standings... Defending champion Springfield averaged an earlier loss to Portsmouth 62-58... Portsmouth holds the only win over Hamilton... Deshler kept its record clean, 66-52 over Hamler.

Racine's 12-game winning streak was snapped by Chaucery 72-55... Jack Keller Jr., son of Ohio State's former great hurdler, leads greater Columbus scorers with 229... Salem has lost two of 11, both to East Liverpool... Zanesville, which had won 14 straight, went down before Olive Branch by 73-42... Lexington, rated sixth in Class B a week ago with 13 wins in a row, dropped games to Lucas, Ontario and Tiro... and Leesville averaged its lone loss in 17 starts by ending Sulphur Springs' 14-game winning streak 58-42.

Boardman won its 12th straight, but needed two overtime periods to subdue Class B Sebring 42-39... Some of the boys were really hot, Fairland rolling over Blackfork 102-20, and East Canton defeating Brewster 103-54.

COMMISSIONER H. W. Enswiler refused today to investigate a scorebook mixup in Louisville's one-point win over Sebring two weeks ago... He said the rules don't allow a protest on such grounds... Sonny Davidson of Minerva hit for 40 points as his team humbled Louisville 84-52 last week.

Among the week's top individual scorers were: Bob Wein-furth of Fairland 34, Jerry Success of Boardman 26, Jim Holzmiller of Sandusky 28 and 21, Bill Rogers of Ashland 33 and 21, Jack Sallee of Springfield 22, Buddy Hoffman of Marysville 27, Harry Fitzpatrick of Lancaster St. Marys 25.

Larry Morrison of Jacksonville-Trimble has scored 20 or more in his last six games... Eight players went out on fouls in the Hamilton-Lancaster game, the officials calling 64 infractions, but Johnny Huddle of Lancaster counted 21 points in the 16 minutes he was in the fray... Ridgeway of Hardin County has scored 1,040 points for a 74 average in winning 12 of 14, and Cletus "hels" has 364 of 'em for a 26-per-game mark.

Wildcats Back As No. 1 Cagers

Oklahoma A&M In Close Second

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 —(P)— With another full month before the first of the basketball tournaments begins, the Kentucky Wildcats and Oklahoma A&M appear due for a battle right down to the wire for the No. 1 collegiate ranking.

For the second week in a row, Kentucky topped the weekly AP poll today, but the margin was by a slim 19 votes over the Aggies of Oklahoma.

Of course, something could pop up to slow down the rankings of one or the other—or both—before the end of the poll. For instance, take the case of Long Island University, the No. 2 team last week, but dropped this week to No. 4 because of its loss to California Saturday, 69-67. Arizona bumped LIU last night at Tucson, 62-61, but this was after the votes were counted for this week's rating.

THE RESULTS all were in last night, however, before Kentucky took the court to thump Tulane, 104-68, at New Orleans. It was a new Southeastern Conference scoring record, and possibly Kentucky felt it needed some positive proof it should show who is boss in the court business.

From here on, the schedule favors Kentucky to add to its 15-1 mark. The Wildcats have nine games left in regular season play, most with impotent Southeastern Conference clubs.

On the other hand, Oklahoma A&M has a tougher row to hoe, especially with some Big Seven and Missouri Valley foes awaiting to ambush Coach Hank Iba's lads.

Here are the leading teams by points based on ten for first place vote, nine for second, etc. (first place votes and season records including last night's games in parentheses):

1. Kentucky (42) (15-1)	988
2. Oklahoma A&M (31) (18-1)	969
3. Indiana (7) (15-1)	926
4. Long Island U. (3) (16-2)	968
5. Bradley (1) (18-3)	551
6. Columbia (4) (12-4)	435
7. Kansas State (4) (13-2)	400
8. N. Carolina State (7) (19-2)	376
9. St. John's (2) (13-2)	341
10. St. Louis (14-4)	238

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

VENNER didn't move or turn his eyes away when Gamadge asked the name of his principal. After a short pause he suddenly took a hand out of a pocket; there was a cigarette case in his fingers. He opened it, took out a cigarette, felt in the pocket for a lighter, and bent his head to get a light. When the cigarette was going, he asked casually, "May I ask a question? It's legitimate when there's something of this kind offered for sale. Where did the envelope come from?"

"We know where it came from originally," said Gamadge. "From the rosewood box in the Coldfield attic. You'll be rather disgusted, I'm afraid—it seems to have been overlooked when the letters were taken."

Venner kept his eyes on his cigarette and a faint smile deepened the creases beside his mouth. "Where the other envelopes may be," continued Gamadge, "I don't know."

"I don't myself."

"So it's all I have to offer."

Venner put his head back to blow smoke. He said, "Well, I'm afraid it's no deal."

"Don't be hasty. I should like to—"

"I'm not much interested. The fact of your coming here with this proposition means of course that you can't stir a step in any direction without my help. Well, that isn't at your disposal."

Gamadge said, "That's the proper first answer, of course. Let me try to make the bargain more acceptable to you. There is no great implied."

"No? It isn't blackmail?" Venner smiled, more broadly.

"I shouldn't call it that. I know very well, Mr. Venner, that this wasn't a commonplace theft—that it was a family affair. I know it wouldn't be publicized, and that you're protected too. You must have felt very safe to take on such a thing. Perhaps you still are; I'm not trying to fix blame in the matter, it isn't directly important to me."

"No?"

"Not at all. I want the name of your principal for a different reason."

"What's that?"

"Are you sure you can't guess it?"

Venner looked him in the eye again. "Can't imagine."

"I'm inclined to believe that you never thought of it before; perhaps now you may. However, my principal will save me from the trouble of using that envelope to get the information elsewhere. I must get it, and if I have to use this evidence, of course I will. If I use it there will be an explosion, and you will probably be the first casualty."

"That's neat," said Venner admiringly.

"It's the situation. There's no trick about it—give me the name, and you get the envelope. It will be of no more use to me. I got it by accident, and I arrived at you as the agent by a clear process of reasoning."

Venner was rocking gently back and forth again, and he was still smiling. "You're not a blackmailer," he said, "but I'm still a fence—member of the criminal classes. We're notoriously suspicious. I get that envelope; what makes me think that you haven't photostatic copies of the incriminating object?"

"You don't seem logical, Mr. Venner. All I want is one piece of information, not more and more information. The envelope tells me nothing useful in itself."

"Sure enough." Venner turned on his heel, walked away to the farthest window, and stood there with his hand gripping the old faded brocade of the curtain: looking out at nothing. He swung round suddenly, and he gave an impression of a man elated. He came back to Gamadge, walking confidently a brightness in his eyes. Gamadge watched him, frowning a little.

"I want twenty-four hours," said Venner.

"No, I must have the information by lunchtime today."

Venner looked at his watch. "That's putting the screws on. One o'clock? Less than three hours?" He turned his head away, seeming to calculate. "Can't be done under three hours, and that's final. And what do I do when I come to a decision? Leave a note for you in a hollow tree in the park?"

Gamadge took out his wallet and gave Venner a card. "No, you call me up."

Venner read the card, raised his eyebrows, and smiled. "I'm afraid I never heard of you. Is this supposed to convince me that I'll get the envelope in the mail?"

"Or you can call for it."

Venner burst out laughing. "I'll trust the mails."

Gamadge said abruptly, "Mr. Venner, may I advise you?"

"What else have you been doing?" The feverish gaiety was still in Venner's eyes.

"Don't consult your principal."

"What?" Venner stared. "You must be out of your mind to think I'd do such a thing. Isn't it the last thing I would do? I'm depending on you to cover up for me—isn't that the pact?"

"Then why the three hours?"

"Surely I ought to be allowed until half past one to wrestle with my conscience."

"Mr. Venner," said Gamadge, "let me earnestly beg you not to try a squeeze play."

"Squeeze play! I'm not a blackmailer either, you know," said Venner, laughing. "I stick to my own line of business."

"Your principal is tougher than you think: let me warn you."

"My principal and I will probably tell you to take your evidence and go to the devil with it." Venner was more and more amused. "You won't get far without us."

"Are you the only person who knows that name?"

Venner paused, looked at Gamadge with knitted brows, and then went off into shouts of laughter. Gamadge left him to it.

As he went out of the foyer through the revolving door, he was immediately aware of the good-looking, dark young man, well-dressed and slender, who stood just outside the entrance, smoking. The dark young man glanced at him, and then walked away from him into the next vestibule. Gamadge followed.

"Was it the party?"

"It was, Mr. Bardo—or is it Mr. Shaff?"

"Old Shaffsky's sitting in the car; got a place to park just around the corner, there isn't much parking just here of a Saturday. If the party comes out, duck into the store behind us and buy yourself a pair of socks."

"You can't miss him. He's about my height, medium coloring, outdoor complexion, long squared-off face, lines from nose to chin. He's been around, and he's an educated man." Gamadge added, "Good clothes, so inconspicuous I hardly noticed them—a dark mixture, brown and something."

Bardo's glance at Gamadge was tolerant. He said, "I won't miss him."

"Have you plenty of money on you? I don't know whether I made Geegan understand—"

"Plenty. If he took a plane we'd have to wire ahead anyway."

"Above all don't lose him. I hired you to tail him, not now you're his bodyguard too."

"That so?" Bardo, watching the exit, said, "I don't know whether I should without your surprise. Why don't you want anything to happen to him?"

"I warned him myself, but he thinks he knows better."

Bardo glanced at him again. "You did?"

"Yes, but never mind that. Just hang on to him."

"Leave it to us. Anybody bothers him, Shaff and I will both carry our guns. Scare people, said Bardo."

Committee Plans Corn Show Here

Prizes Assigned;
Dates Announced

Assigning of prizes to the various groups entered in the annual Corn and Hobby Show, to be held in the Armory in Washington C. H. Feb. 22, 23 and 24 was discussed by the members of the show committee meeting here Monday afternoon.

There have been offered by the Hotel Washington, prizes assigned for the members of the vocational agriculture classes in the county. The vo-ag students will compete in a class separate from the other grain exhibits, but any of the boys who want to enter the open competition may do so, according to the committee.

Space was allotted to the Cub Scouts for a booth to display various handicrafts on which they have been working.

There are 34 classes to be shown and judged in the show with entries coming from Fayette and surrounding counties.

"There seems to be a lot of interest being shown in this year's show," according to Robert Case, secretary of the Fayette County Seed Improvement Association.

The highlight of the three-day show will be the farmers and businessmen's banquet, to be held on the second day of the show, Feb. 23 in the Masonic Temple. The members of the Eastern Star will serve the banquet which this year will be on the businessmen.

The speaker for the fete hasn't as yet been selected, but it is planned to have some well known person on hand for the main speech.

The show is one of the oldest in the state as well as one of the best known.

C of C Official Backs Guard Unit

C. E. McCarley, executive secretary of the Washington C. H. Chamber of Commerce, has put himself behind Company M, Ohio National Guard, with the following statement:

"Like everybody here in Washington C. H. I have a lot of respect for these young men who voluntarily devote their spare time to the National Guard.

"They are a trained force of patriotic Americans, ready to defend their homes and country at a moment's notice. These young men are our kind of folks. They're our friends and neighbors and deserve all the support we can give them."

Men of Company M train one night each week at full army pay. Guardsmen receive training in leadership and in many technical skills, plus the fun of a program of sports and recreational activities.

Community Chest

The directors had a new request for participation in the Community Chest from the United Defense Fund. The fund is said to include all services for servicemen, including the Associated Services, travel aid and social hygiene.

The board decided to include the new group in the Chest as a replacement for Associated Services (formerly the USO). An additional allotment was voted for the fund.

A nominating committee, consisting of Joe Peters, chairman, Harold Craig and Perse Harlow, was selected to nominate officers for the next Community Chest meeting. At the next meeting an election will be held.

Industrial Gas Cut

The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. last night again cut the amount of gas available to factories to divert to homes. The cut now amounts to 72,000,000 cubic feet a day which formerly went to 170 industrial plants.

Icy highways cut attendance at the annual Ohio Pastors Convention in Columbus from an expected 2,000 to 800. They also were blamed for a relatively small crowd at the Ohio State-Northwestern basketball game last night.

Port Columbus was opened for air travel Monday afternoon. It had been closed since Sunday.

Greyhound bus officials reported lines operating out of Columbus were nearly on schedule, and trains going through Columbus were from a few minutes to more than one hour late.

Cold Is Widespread

Midwinter's most severe weather lashed most of the nation today and there wasn't much relief in sight.

A bitter cold wave gripped the central part of the country.

It was warmer near the Arctic Circle in Canada than in many parts of the mid-continent.

For the second straight day temperatures dropped far below zero in the Midwest. One reading early today 45 degrees below.

And it was cold and icy and wet over widespread areas of the east. Colder weather was on the way, said U. S. forecasters, for much of the east and parts of the south.

Snow fell in Houston, Tex., and the mercury dropped to 25 above.

Tractor Club Holds Organization Meet

Hugh Wilson and Ronald Hidy were elected presidents of the basic and advanced classes of the county 4-H Tractor Maintenance Club at its organizational meeting Monday evening. The meeting was held in the Don Scholl's implement store near Washington C. H.

The group, in charge of Robert Browning, Eldon Hidy and Albert Cobb, was divided into two classes for the study and maintenance of farm machinery.

Other officers elected in the basic class were: Robert Cannon, vice president; William Trimmer, secretary; James Cunningham, treasurer, and Roger Bonham, news reporter.

In the advanced class elections, Roger Hayes was named vice president and Joe Pope was elected secretary.

After the meeting members saw a film on farm implements furnished by the Allis-Chalmers Implement Company.

Refreshments were served by Don Scholl and the employees of the store. The next meeting is planned for Feb. 5 and will be held at the Kirk Implement Store.

Temperatures were below freezing all the way to the Rio Grande Valley. The cold threatened citrus and vegetables in the rich agricultural region.

Death Toll Mounts

There was a mounting death toll attributed to the cold and icy weather. Hundreds suffered injuries in falls on icy streets.

Schools closed in many areas—in the east and Texas by ice storms, in the midwest and west by cold weather. Travel on highways was slowed. Many air flights were cancelled. Communications were disrupted in some areas because of ice-coated power lines.

The midwest, like yesterday, got the most severe cold, with readings far below zero. They also reached sub-zero levels in the northern and central Rockies.

The below-zero line extended as far south as the southern portions of Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kansas.

Wisconsin and Minnesota reported the lowest marks in the early morning—45 below at Lone Rock, Wis., and -37 at St. Cloud, Minn. It was -23 at Mason City, Ia., -19 at Milwaukee, -14 at Chicago, -7 at Lansing, Mich., and -1 at St. Louis.

Temperatures in the east generally were below freezing—and more cold air was predicted to move in during the day and tonight.

But in most of the midwest readings never climbed as far as zero all day yesterday and then started falling after sundown. Chicago had a high of -3 yesterday after an early morning low of -9. It was colder today—with a minimum of -14.

Whiteside & Son Buy Feed Business

The Good Hope Feed Co. has been purchased by Edward F. Whiteside & Son who plan to continue the feed store, grain elevator and farm supply business there.

This business is not new to Whiteside, he said in making the announcement of the purchase. He pointed out that he has had 15 years experience as a manager in the feed business and that for many years he has been a member of the Ohio Seed Improvement Association.

Whiteside & Son have the Fellowship Award in recognition of 10 years of continuous cooperation with the corn improvement program of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station of the college of agriculture of Ohio State University and the United States Department of Agriculture. His interest, he said, has been in seed of adopted corn hybrids.

In early life, Whiteside taught school in Madison County for several years. He also was chairman of the American Agriculture Association of Madison County for many years.

Always active in farm life, he started as a farm hand, then be-

25 Factories In County, Report Shows

According to information contained in the annual Manufacturers' Directory published by the state industrial relations department, Fayette County had 25 manufacturing establishments with 1,037 employees in 1949.

According to later estimates here, this number for Fayette County has increased somewhat during the past year.

The directory lists all manufacturers in the state of Ohio according to their principal product and the number of men and women employed during a representative week. It did not include any manufacturing establishments.

The volume shows the following figures for neighboring counties:

Fairfield, 52 firms employing 6,014 persons; Pickaway 27 firms, 1516 employees; Franklin, 636 firms, 53,377 employees; Highland, 32 firms, 1,662 employees; Hocking, 33 firms, 1,144 employees; Madison, 14 firms, 749 employees; and Ross County, 35 firms, 3,681 employees.

In manufacturing establishments the ratio for male to female employment ran about four to one during 1949. There were 857,477 males representing 79.2 per cent of the total, and 225,588 females accounting for 20.8 per cent of all those employed.

Theft Case Reopened

Blackstone Avenue, Washington C. H., Ohio, has consulted with me concerning a theft loss, which she claims to have sustained on or about December 22, 1947, when she had $2,600, in cash stolen from a locked cedar chest in the home of George Ferris, Rawlings Street, Washington C. H., Ohio.

"It is my understanding that a report on this theft loss was made to your police department at about that time by Mrs. Flowers and that Officer James Finny made some investigations, but nothing of importance was done, in connection with same.

"Mrs. Flowers says that she had worked at the API Plant and had saved the money, where she was making $59 per week during a period of 18 months employment there. She also advised that she worked at Mark's Laundry for a period of five years and was working there at the time this theft occurred.

"I am further informed by Mrs. Flowers that she had this $2,600, on deposit in the Washington Savings Bank, but had withdrawn it about six months before it was reported stolen.

"In my opinion this theft loss probably has never been properly investigated by either the Washington C. H. police department or the sheriff and prosecutor's office, and I think it really needs special attention. Do you think you could assist in seeing that this matter is properly looked into at this time. If you can, it will be greatly appreciated.

"Any report you can furnish me on this for Mrs. Flowers will also be appreciated."
